Naperville Public Library Director Named An "Influential Women in Business" for 2009

Naperville Public Library Executive Director Donna Dziejczak has been named an "Influential Women in Business" for 2009 by The Business Ledger. Dziejczak received the award along with 21 area business women at an Oak Brook luncheon.

This is the 12th class of women to be recognized by the newspaper and its partner, the National Association of Women Business Owners, Chicago Area chapter.

"How could I not be thrilled by this recognition?" explains Dziejczak. "While I have long maintained that public libraries must be efficient businesses and provide our residents 'good bang for their taxpayer bucks!,' it is thrilling to be recognized for this by business owners. It's wonderful that the business community acknowledges the vital role public libraries play as economic drivers for the community. At the Naperville Public Library, we work to provide excellent library services while carefully shepherding taxpayer dollars."
